To Whom It May Concern:

I would quit work and go to another country if you go through with this proposed ban on all indoor public smoking. There are 45 million Americans who smoke. Where are we all supposed to go?

I think OSHA needs to go somewhere. Their research is terrible. They fix statistics to their need. The EPA report on the dangers of second-hand smoke has been called into question by the Congressional Research Service. Now the report is being challenged in court. OSHA needs to base its proposed regulations on facts. It could take the courts years to decide this question. You need to get real and deal with drugs and all the dealers on the streets. That's what's wrong with this country, not smokers.

Perhaps what is needed is a national sick day or two to let you folks know the value of workers who choose to smoke.
